Global Military Products and Hanwha Defense USA Sign Teaming Agreement to Modernize the Army's Domestic Advanced Ammunition and Energetics
Production Capabilities

TAMPA, FL – (14, October 2025) – Global Military Products (GMP), a wholly owned subsidiary of Global Ordnance Holdings, announced today the signing of a strategic teaming agreement with Hanwha Aerospace to jointly pursue future U.S. Department of Defense opportunities in ammunition and energetics production.

“This partnership represents a significant step toward strengthening the domestic defense industrial base,” said Jeff Brunozi, President of Global Ordnance Holdings. “By aligning GMP’s U.S. program management and manufacturing expertise with Hanwha’s advanced energetics and munitions technologies, we are positioned to bring cutting-edge capabilities to the U.S. Army and allied forces.”

Under the agreement, GMP and Hanwha intend to pursue operating contracts and establish new energetics and munitions technologies. The collaboration will focus on developing next-generation energetics, propellants, and ammunition components to support Army modernization efforts and ensure resilient, scalable U.S. manufacturing for critical munitions.

“Hanwha is committed to expanding our presence in the U.S. defense market through meaningful industrial partnerships,” said Mike Smith, President & CEO of Hanwha Defense USA. “Together with GMP, we aim to strengthen supply chain resilience and deliver advanced munitions solutions that enhance the readiness and capability of U.S. and allied forces.”

This agreement underscores GMP’s continued growth as a trusted U.S. defense partner. It reflects the company’s long-term commitment to revitalizing domestic ammunition and energetics production infrastructure in support of the Army’s modernization priorities.
